

Rosemarie D. Correa Wins!

NASA Space Flight Awareness Award

Description:

This award is one of the highest presented to NASA, industry and employees for their dedication to the quality of work and flight safety. When an SFA Honoree event is held at Kennedy Space Center, the honorees have an opportunity to view a Space Shuttle launch, attend a reception in their honor, and meet senior management from NASA and industry as well as members of the astronaut corps.

To be considered for this award, employees must have significantly contributed to the human space flight program to ensure flight safety and mission success.

Citation:

Rosemarie D. Correa

Project Leader 11

Years of Service - 26

Rosemarie is recognized for her leadership that has led to numerous successes in implementing new and innovative processes, which has reduced inefficiencies and provided many cost saving benefits for this company. Five years ago, Rosie was tasked with developing a process to evaluate and implement employee improvement suggestions from the floor. With her team, she developed a process flow chart and began accepting suggestions. To date, the Lean Initiatives team has saved USA well over $5 million. Her attention to detail and ability to look at every aspect of new projects and communicate the importance in covering all the necessary requirements ensures that all the projects worked by her group are always implemented with increased reliability, efficiency and accountability.

Her dedication to the company and her team and her willingness to always support the idea's of the workforce and the needs of this program and the programs to come make her an invaluable leader to us all.